SUPPLEMENT—Official Papers

DIRECTORATE OF AGRICULTURE, WEST BENGAL.

Calcutta, the 11th August 1954.

Note.—The preliminary forecast deals with the area and the conditions of the crop in the early part of the jute-growing season. The estimate of outturn is shown in the final forecast].

Season.—In most of the districts, rainfall was te and inadequate. The weather condition was r though its droughty nature hampered the cultivation of jute in some districts. Late heavy rainfall after sowing also hampered the cultivation at some places.

In the districts of Malda, West Dinajpur, Jalpaiguri, Cooch Behar and Darjeeling, some damages are apprehended owing to heavy rains and floods which have occurred lately.

Area.—According to the preliminary survey, 5,64,600 acres are estimated to have been sown with the crop this year as against 568,900 acres and 534,700 acres reported respectively in the corresponding and in the final forecasts of last year.

Calcutta, the 31st August 1954.

t forecast of Cotton Crop of West Bengal for 1954-55.

ason.—The weather conditions have not been urable at the sowing time in almost all ets of West Bengal. It has been reported sowing is still continuing in the districts of lwan, Midnapore, Hooghly and Howrah.

rea sown.—230 acres have been estimated to nder cotton this year compared to 1,250 acres, final estimate of last year. The entire area is reported to have been sown with Parbhani American variety this year (with long staple).

Decrease in acreage as shown in the first forecast is due to the following reasons:—

1. Long continued drought during the sowing season.
2. Prevailing low market price of the seed cotton
3. Abolition of Cotton Development Scheme and stoppage of subsidy on manure and seeds, etc.

Area and yield.—Winter Potato.—99,700 acres have been estimated to be under Winter Potato this year compared to 96,300 acres in the final forecast of last year.

The total outturn of the crop for the State as a whole is estimated at 404,500 tons this year as against 412,800 tons reported in the final forecast of last year.

The average outturn per acre of the crop for the State as a whole is estimated at 110·44 maunds this year as against 116·69 maunds reported in the final forecast of last year.

Summer Potato.—Summer Potato grows only in the hilly regions of Darjeeling district. The total area under Summer Potato in these regions is estimated at 4,100 acres this year compared to 4,100 acres of last year. The outturn of Summer Potato is estimated at 9,040 tons this year compared to 8,300 tons last year. Preliminary Forecast of Autumn Rice Crop of West Bengal for 1954-55.

[Note.—The figures of area for this year are the first estimates of State Statistical Bureau, West Bengal, these are based on the analysis of half Sample "A" of their random sample survey. The area estimates of last year have been taken from the last year's final forecast based on the results of sample survey conducted by the Bureau. The yield rates of last year have been taken from the last year's final forecast based on crop cutting experiments carried out by the State Statistical Bureau. The yield rate figures for this year are based on the eye-estimates of the staff of the Directorate of Agriculture, it being too early for crop cutting experiments.]

Season.—In the early stage drought prevailed in most of the districts and consequently, there has been in general late sowing. Except in Murshidabad the growth of the crop has also been adversely affected by droughty conditions which prevailed in most of the southern districts. Heavy rainfall and frequent floods in northern districts have damaged a certain extent of Aus crop. It is apprehended that owing to drought, flood and late transplantation, the yield rate will go down considerably. Subsequent rainfall has, however, been beneficial for the crop.

Area and yield.—1,189,300 acres have been estimated to be under Autumn Rice this year as against 1,629,600 acres and 1,569,900 acres reported respectively in the corresponding and final forecast of last year. The average yield of cleaned rice per acre for the State as a whole is tentatively estimated to be 7·49 maunds this year compared to 9·19 maunds and 9·13 maunds reported respectively in the corresponding and final forecast of last year.

First Forecast of Winter Rice Crop of West Bengal for 1954-55.

[Note.—The figures of last year have been taken from the last year's final forecast of Winter Rice. As the sample survey estimates for this year are not yet available, the figures shown for this year are based on the reports received from the staff of the Directorate of Agriculture. The estimates of yield rate for this year are purely eye-estimates, it being too early for any crop cutting experiment.]

Season.—The season for Winter Rice crop has been particularly bad this year. Severe drought prevailed for long time during the usual time of sowing. Consequently large areas could not be transplanted in normal time in almost all the southern districts of West Bengal. The weather conditions were not so unfavourable in the northern districts at the early stage but the subsequent heavy rainfall and floods hampered the transplantation and a large percentage of Aman area has been damaged.

It is apprehended that owing to drought, flood and late transplantation, the yield rates will go down considerably. The occasional showers in September have, however, been beneficial for the crop. The estimate as reported in the first forecast covers the period up to 15th September.

Area and yield.—6,747,700 acres have been estimated to be under Winter Rice this year compared to 8,859,400 acres and 8,933,900 acres reported respectively in the corresponding and final forecast of last year.

The yield of cleaned rice per acre for the State as a whole is estimated at 11·41 maunds compared to 11·76 maunds and 14·26 maunds reported respectively in the corresponding and final forecast of last year.

Final Estimate of Jute Crop of West Bengal for 1954-55.

[Note.—The estimates of area and production of Jute both for last year and this year given herein are based on the results of sample survey and crop-cutting experiments conducted by the State Statistical Bureau, West Bengal. It may be noted that as the crop-cutting experiments in the districts of Burdwan, Birbhum and Bankura could not be completed, yield rates in respect of these three districts have been estimated on the basis of the results of Midnapore, Howrah and Hooghly. It may also be mentioned that the survey for estimating the extent of damage caused by flood in the districts of North Bengal could not be completed. When these details are available, the estimates may have some changes which, however, will be incorporated in the next year's forecast.]

Season.—As reported in the preliminary forecast, droughty weather conditions hampered the cultivation of jute in some districts. The weather conditions had not been very favourable for the growth of the crop. Excessive rain and flood caused considerable damages to the crop in the districts of Darjeeling, Cooch Behar, Jalpaiguri, Malda and West Dinajpur.

Area and yield.—547,900 acres are estimated to be under jute this year as against 534,700 acres last year.

The total production has been estimated to be 1,465,200 bales this year as against 1,498,400 bales last year.

The average yield per acre is estimated to be 2·67 bales this year as against 2·80 bales last year.

The decrease in outturn may mainly be attributed to excessive rain and flood in the districts of North Bengal.

H. K. NANDI,
Director of Agriculture, West Bengal.
